Parents and their child's coaches:

Your child is likely to be influenced by their Head Coaches and Assistant Coaches, not only in learning how to play softball and to enjoy the game, but also in physical, psychological, and social development. Because Head Coaches/Assistant Coaches are powerful role models for young athletes, they face tremendous challenges and considerable responsibilities.

We would like to tell you some things about Woodstock Girls Softball League's Head Coaches and Assistant Coaches in general. All Woodstock Girls Softball Head Coaches and Assistant Coaches are volunteers. They donate many hours a week throughout the season to coach your child.

Woodstock Girls Softball does all it can to provide adequate coaches for each team, but once in a while a poor coach slips through. Thus, it is important that you make sure your child's Head Coach/Assistant Coaches acts in your child's best interest.

Things you can look for to see how your child's coach is coaching:

- Coaching Philosophy
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should keep winning and losing in perspective. Their objective should not be to win-at-all- costs.
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should ensure that learning softball is fun?
- Knowledge
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should have a good understanding of the rules and skills of softball. They should have knowledge of how to teach these skills to our children.
- Leadership
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should build their leadership on mutual respect and not intimidation.

Woodstock Girls Softball Code of Conduct Guidelines for 2010 Season

- Self-Control
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should conduct themselves in a sportsmanlike manner that they expect of their players.
Player mistakes should be handled by the Head Coach/Assistant Coach in such a manner to build the players up not put them down.
 - Understanding
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should be sensitive to the emotions of the players.
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should treat each child as an individual, being sensitive to each child's needs.
 - Communication
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should communicate with their players so that their words and actions create a positive feeling.
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should listen to their players as well as talk.
 - Consistency
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should be fair with all players, treating all players equal.
 - Respect
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should act in such a manner to gain respect of their players and become a role model for their players.
 - Enthusiasm
The Head Coach/Assistant Coach should show enthusiasm for the practices and the games.

No One is Perfect

There are several ways to learn more about your child's coach. Don't feel you are snooping; you will be fulfilling your obligation as a responsible parent.

1. Talk with the coach about any questions you may have.
2. Observe the coach in practice and games.
3. Talk with other parents who have had children play under this coach.

Remember, no coach will be perfect (just as we are not perfect parents), but you need to be satisfied that your child's coach meet some minimum standards.

Dealing with Unsatisfactory Coaching

Parents often have a difficult time dealing with their child's coach when they decide that he or she is coaching in an unsatisfactory way. Thoughtful parents are reluctant to interfere and hesitant to remove their child from the team. Children may resent being forced to quit; they fear losing face and may enjoy the sport so much that they want to continue participating in spite of a poor coach. Parents must use good judgment in such situations, communicating with both the child and the coach to resolve the problem.

Woodstock Girls Softball Code of Conduct Guidelines for 2010 Season

We recommend that you begin by discussing the problem with the Head Coach/Assistant Coach. Explain your concern and then listen to their perspective.

If discussing the issue with the Head Coach/Assistant Coach does not resolve the problem, then you need to consider going to your Divisional Representative (Names and telephone numbers are listed on Pg 2).

The Divisional Representative is required to bring all problems to the Board of Directors.

How you can help out

Remember that most coaches are striving to do the best they can. You can help make the coach's job a bit easier, as well as help your child enjoy softball more, by doing the following things:

1. Let your child know you support their participation in Woodstock Girls Softball. Get involved, volunteer your time in the league, practice with your child, attend games, and show that you care.
 2. Keep the coach informed if your child is sick or has been injured.
 3. Keep the coach informed if your child must miss any practice or game.
 4. Help the coach when asked to do so. You might be needed to man the concession stand, keep score, or assist the coach during a game or event.
 5. Keep control of yourself. Set a good example.

All head coaches, assistant coaches, umpires, players, and parents must have a signed Code of Conduct and Game Guidelines prior to season participation.
